3-TO-20 YEARS ASKED IN BEN BARKA TRIAL

Special to The New York Times

PARIS, Oct. 14 — The public prosecutor today asked for prison sentences ranging from 3 to 20 years for those arrested in Paris for the kidnapping of Mehdi Ben Barka, the exiled leader of the Moroccan Opposition.

Mr. Ben Barka was abducted on the busy Boulevard St. Germain on Oct. 29, 1965, and driven to a suburban villa. He has never been seen again and is presumed dead.

The prosecutor, André Toubas, asked for a 20-year sentence for Antoine Lopez, whom he charged with having organized the crime on orders from Gen. Mohammed Oufkir, the Moroccan Interior Minister.

The prosecutor asked for a 20-year sentence for Philippe Bernier, a newspaperman who had induced Mr. Ben Barka to come to Paris from his home at Geneva.

For Marcel Le Roy, alias Finville, a ranking member of France's intelligence agency, the prosecutor demanded three years. Unlike the others, Le Roy is not charged with complicity but with having withheld from his superiors advance information on the plot obtained from his informer, Lopez.

The trial is expected to last another week. The six lawyers for the defense will each make a plea before the jury returns its verdict. Court circles expect the verdict to correspond to most of the prosecutor's demands.
